FROM DREAMS TO REALITY

At Northern Voices, dreams become reality for families of young children with hearing loss. Through early, specialized intervention, our students learn to use listening and spoken language to find their own voices.

Today's remarkable technologies are able to maximize access to sound, making it possible to effectively develop spoken language even for children with severe to profound hearing loss. These technologies range from digital hearing aids and cochlear implants to FM systems and Bluetooth®. However, since hearing aids and cochlear implants do not restore normal hearing, appropriate therapy to stimulate the development of speech and language skills is critical. Research indicates that there are significant communication benefits when children are enrolled in early intervention programs by six months of age.

Northern Voices serves young children with hearing loss, from infancy through preschool, by providing a unique educational setting; a specialized, research-based intervention process; individualized, supportive instruction; and highly trained faculty.

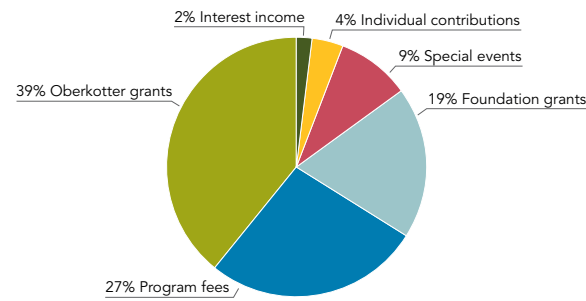

An innovative curriculum developed by Jean Sachar Moog, an internationally recognized leader in deaf education, is the key to our successful program. The award-winning curriculum, developed by Moog while principal at Central Institute for the Deaf in St. Louis (CID), has twice been recognized for excellence by the U.S. Department of Education. No other program for children who are deaf and hard-of-hearing has ever received this award.

Through early, individualized intervention, Northern Voices seeks to provide all of our students, regardless of income or background, with the skills they need to be fully integrated into mainstream school settings as early as possible.

We believe that each child should have an opportunity to reach his or her full potential, and we are committed to serving every family, regardless of income level. However, these remarkable outcomes come at a cost. Program fees, paid either by public school districts or students' families, constitute only 27% of total income. Grants, individual contributions and special events – such as the annual Northern Voices Charity Golf Tournament – provide the majority of our operating budget.
